- 2) Satyarthi does not want to share the voices of the children.
- 3) All great religions teach us to take care of our children.
- 4) The children have frightened eyes.

Friends, the Nobel Committee has generously invited me to present a "lecture." Respectfully, I am unable to do that. Because, I am representing here - the sound of silence. The cry of innocence. And, the face of invisibility. I represent millions of those children who are left behind and that's why I have kept an empty chair here as a reminder.

I have come here only to share the voices and dreams of our children - because they are all our children - (gesture to everyone in the audience). I have looked into their frightened and exhausted eyes. I have held their injured bodies and felt their broken spirits.

Twenty years ago, in the foothills of the Himalayas, I met a small, skinny child laborer. He asked me: "Is the world so poor that it cannot give me a toy and a book, instead of forcing me to take a gun or a tool?"

I met with a Sudanese child-soldier. He was kidnapped by an extremist militia. As his first training lesson, he was forced to kill his friends and family. He asked me: "What is my fault?"

Friends, all the great religions teach us to care for our children. Jesus said "Let the children come to me; do not hinder them, for the kingdom of God belongs to them. The holy Quran says: "Kill not your children because of poverty."

Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening

Whose woods these are I think I know.
His house is in the village, though;
He will not see me stopping here
To watch his woods fill up with snow.

My little horse must think it queer
To stop without a farmhouse near
Between the woods and frozen lake
The darkest evening of the year.

He gives his harness bells a shake
To ask if there is some mistake.
The only other sound's the sweep
Of easy wind and downy flake.

The woods are lovely, dark and deep,
But I have promises to keep,

And miles to go before I sleep, And miles to go before I sleep.

There was a small village in North Karnataka with a population of five to Eight thousand. It boasted of a beautiful lake with a temple of Lord Hanuman on its shore. The area was dotted with banyan trees. In Kannada, a banyan tree is called 'aladamara' and 'halli' means village, so the village was named Aladahalli. Aladahalli had only one main road, with houses on either side and bus stand right in the middle of the village. Most people who were from here preferred to stay on and commute for work to the cities nearby; Hubli and Dharwad. The advantages of staying in Aladahalli were a laid – back life, less noise and almost no pollution. The greatest attraction though was the school, which was on par with any city school and where the medium of instruction was both English and Kannada. Just like in city schools, the students got a rank based on their merit. Bheemanna's daughter, Mridula, was among the top few students in her class and was known for her intelligence.
